Hixburg

Hixburg, July 28.- If you happen to be driving through Hixburg and hear a "tapping, tapping," it will not be Poe's "Raven," but probably one of the Hix brothers, who are building a large machinery shed. Also, it might be the men of Wagner's Presbyterian Church, who, under the supervision of "Capt." Covington, are erecting an addition to the church.

Some good Baptists with a community spirit have been helping. Hollywood Baptist men cut logs, and Edward Webb, of that church gave timber. Henry Covington, and son, Eddie, are lending a hand with the building. They are members of Elon Baptist Church, of Pamplin.

Nearly every day some of the following are wielding a hammer there: besides "Capt." Covington, Lee Glenn, Hunter and Joe Goin, Bob Covington, Ryland Taylor, David Phillips, and the assistant pastor, Will Crumpin. All their labor is gratis.

A large crowd attended the Ernest Harwood sale on Saturday. The auction lasted most of the day, and many choice pieces were bought. Mrs. Harwood, who is a connoisseur on antiques, had much to offer.

Up from Richmond on Sunday were Crote Carson and family. After attending Sunday School at Walker's Presbyterian Church, they with Crote's father, Mr. Ernest Carson, went to Holliday Lake and had a picnic dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Adams, of Richmond were week-end guests of her father, Mr. DeWitt Goin.

While there they visited his aunts, Mrs. Hattie Loggins and Mrs. Sarah Ferguson, who are twin sisters, and are 88 years old.

Mrs. Annie Meadows and Mrs. Louise Clifton visited Mrs. Mattie Gilliespie at Crest Haven Rest Home on Sunday afternoon.

GREEN THUMB IS NO GIFT OF NATURE

A "green thumb" isn't bestowed by nature. Most people have to exert a little effort to attain a green thumb reputation, in the thinking of VPI horticulturists.

For instance, now is the time to do several things around the flower garden.

Gladiolus are in danger of damage from thrips unless care is taken to control them. Use a 3 to 5 per cent DDT dust or DDT wettable powder mixed in water as directed on the package. Thrip injury can be reduced by syringing the glads with tap water after sunset.

Daffodil bulbs may be dug now, if they need to be moved or divided. If the tops are yellow but not dead, leave them on the bulbs. Bushel baskets are useful as storage containers for the summer. Place the daffodils with the bulbs toward the bottom of the basket. Separate different varieties by using sheets of newspaper between them. Store in a dry, shaded, ventilated place until they are dry enough to clean. They can be planted in September and early October. Tulip bulbs keep best in the ground, but they can be handled in the same way as daffodils.

At this time of year, flowers and newly-set ornamental plants often suffer from the lack of water. Water them in late afternoon, or use a sprinkler after dark, to prevent evaporation. Shrubs and trees which have been recently planted can be syringed or watered at twilight.

Hardy pinks should be cut back after the flowers fade or after the seeds mature. Leave 3 to 4 inches of foliage on the plant. In sunny borders, these dainty flowers remain green all year. Hybrid pinks come in many colors and with countless variations in the form of flowers. The doubles usually disappear when plants are raised from home-grown seed. Seeds may be planted now.

The zinnia season can be extended by sowing the seeds at two or three different times. This flower will grow with little care, where many others fail. It likes sun and can withstand much heat and drouth. If you grow zinnias for exhibition, work hard to prevent injury, but most gardeners can enjoy looking at zinnias with less critical eyes. Seeds saved from home-grown flowers will come up readily next year. The colors will not be the same, but the flowers will be satisfactory.

Many ornamental plants can be rooted now under glass jars or in specially prepared beds. Climbing roses of the hardy type can be rooted from July to September. Some hybrid tea roses may grow better on their own roots than on the commonly used understocks. It is best, with hybrid teas, to root the cutting where the rose is to grow. Otherwise, leave it where it was rooted for one full season before transplanting.

Boxwood cuttings may be rooted easily in a shaded place where the cuttings are protected from direct wind.

Box-elder bugs will soon be leaving their host trees for winter quarters. They do no harm, but no one particularly wants them around. There are three ways to control them. Destroy box-elder trees on which they feed and multiplies. Spray trees now with 3 per cent chlordane or 2½ per cent malathion. Use a pint of emulsion per 100 gallons.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By Edward H. Sims

Do the winds of a hurricane in the southern hemisphere rotate around the eye clockwise or counterclockwise?

In the southern hemisphere winds around such storms rotate clockwise — just the opposite from their movement in the northern hemisphere .This is believed to be caused by the motion of the turning earth.

All the signs and warning omens of hurricanes, then, would be read differently in the southern hemisphere. Many other phenomena are different below the equator.

Nature's deflection of bullets and shells, growing characteristics of certain trees, the way rivers cut into one bank, all are different in the southern hemisphere. There of testing.

the prevailing veer of these things is to the left, not the right.

Raining Motocycles

Kyoto, Japan.- It's practically raining motorcycles at Shigeo Tanaka's house. The things have been falling in his garden and on his house at a maddeningly increasing rate. Ten so far have dropped in.

Tanaka's home lies at the bottom of an S-turn on a highway. A policeman was surveying the damage done by one motorcycle when another whizzed in, scoring a near miss. Earlier seven plopped into Tanaka's yard within an hour.

Tanaka has asked the highway people to put up a fence.
